EDITOR'S TABLE.

The Zoophiles held their general meeting on Monday night, and elected a new Committee and new President, as General and Doctor Sarmiento categorically declared from the chair that for no inducement in this sub-lunary vale of tears would he consent to continue President of the Society.

What he says they do to the old gentleman? Don't touch him with the shes of the burned "vassara".

The legal tussle between the Anglo-Argentine and C.B.A. tram companies continued that miserable bit of line in Calle Balcarce between Alameda and Rivadavia has ended in a draw, as they are both in the right sentence by Judge Saenz, who has decided that the line is joint property. What asses they were to go to law over it, and what peace and concord there will be for the future between the joint owners!

The Austrian and Italian Consuls are going for each other (in a gentlemanly way of course) to decide which of them is to have the carriage of the "testamentaria" of Signor Agazzi, a young painter who died last week. The "difunto" was born in Venice while the Austrians ruled the roost there.

The babies of the steamer Europa have been christened in the usual wayward voyage. His widow and five little ones are in Italy. He left a short and touching letter in his cabin: "Dearest wife, I, this your fault or mine? Farewell."

That dear old Consejo D. is summoned again for to-night. We'll bet it won't meet. It's always pretty safe to lay against rain and the Consejo.

Our highly esteemed colleague La Union, has been changed into a joint stock concern, capital 100,000 nts, in 1000 shares of 100 each. The paper will be enlarged and improved, and we wish it the best success.

The Tribuna publishes a patriotic cheer from Bolivia, where some glorious shot-standard of Belgrano's army have turned up with suspicious suddenness. But, no doubt, it's right, like the English flags in Santa Domingo.

The Lazaretto Junta declare that the structure on Martin Garcia is finished, and immigrants can now pass their quarantine there instead of on board the steamers. This is good news for the Ligurians. Nothing more miserable can be well conceived than a thousand human beings cooped up in a steamer at anchor.

The La Plata Club will give its last concert for this season on Monday next.

We salute and embrace our diminutive colleague Figure in his new house, and new dress. It gives one a fervent appetite for breakfast to read our little colleague.

A poor little baby-boy of two years old was killed by a Flores tram-car at Almagro on Monday.

He was crossing the line with an elder brother, and the latter when he saw the car coming, let go the baby's hand and saved himself. The question is to be asked: how far did the baby go? He went to the car, and was run over. The car was stopped, and the baby was taken to the hospital. The car was then driven away, and the baby was taken to the hospital.

Canal Miller has just returned from his trip to Paraguay in search of renewed health which, we very much regret to hear, he did not find.

They are going to do something for the wretched South end at last. The barranca on the river in Calle Cochabamba is to be levelled off with the level of the earth.

No town, even in the United States, can show (at least on paper) greater progress than Pringle.

It is in fact a town on bare camp, and now counts 350 of what are styled, by a stretch of courtesy, houses.

There is a tremendous howl amongst the frequenters of all the cafes in town, as Colonel Bosch has pre-emptorily enforced the law that forbids card-playing in such places. We hope the Colonel won't touch that sugar and water game, dominoes. If he does, there will certainly be a revolution, as our highly intelligent "bourgeoisie" cannot get on without passing their evenings over the most dreary of games.

The Public of Mercedes has burst up, the first of the pawns down in the furious electioneering game now being played on the political chess-board.

The old story! A noted ruffian was shot dead on Monday at South Bar, by a police officer in defiance of his life, and yet the policeman has been put under arrest when he deserves high praise.
